Simulazione call: schede per Giovanni

Tu fai il cliente, Polina risponde. Le domande sono in inglese, esattamente come le fa il cliente. Il resto (istruzioni) è in italiano.

Come condurre la simulazione

1. Scegli uno scenario (una pagina ciascuno). Leggi a Polina solo chi è il cliente, non le note.
2. Fai le domande una alla volta, a voce, come in una vera call. Non aiutarla e non suggerire.
3. Dopo la risposta, se c'è la colonna "Se insiste", fai anche quella: il cliente non è convinto.
4. Nella colonna "Deve dire" controlla i punti. Segna OK se li ha detti quasi tutti. Non correggerla durante la domanda, solo alla fine.
5. Alla fine passa 5 minuti sul punteggio qui sotto e sulle domande perse. Falle riprovare solo quelle.

Cosa guardare in ogni risposta (5 criteri)

Calma	Voce tranquilla, niente fretta, nessuna paura delle domande difficili.
Onestà	Dice "non lo so, ti rispondo oggi" invece di inventare. Dichiara i limiti (nessun audit, timestamp non qualificato).
Parole vietate	Mai "tamper-proof", "compliant", "AI Act ready", "secure", "certified", "open source". Nessun numero o data inventati.
Breve	Risposta in 20-40 secondi, in parole sue, niente gergo tecnico.
Chiude	Ogni call finisce con UN passo successivo e un giorno preciso.

Domande da fare in OGNI scenario

Sono le sei che un cliente fa quasi sempre. Falle comunque, anche se lo scenario non le prevede. Usa le parole esatte.

Apertura (la dice Polina): "Thank you for your time. I will keep this to 30 minutes. First I would like to understand how you use AI agents today, then I will show a 2-minute demo, and at the end we decide together if a small test makes sense. Is that OK?"

Chiusura (la dice Polina): "Would it make sense to try this with one of your agents? It is a free pilot, and our technical team connects it with you in less than an hour. Which day this week or next works for you?"
